Fulbright Supports U. S. Move For Recognition of Mongolia

Senator Says Step Would Be
'Rather Wise'—Keating
Voices Opposition

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, July 23—Senator J. W. Fulbright said today that he thought it would be "rather wise" for the United States to recognize Outer Mongolia.

The Arkansas Democrat, who is chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, added that he believed Communist China should be kept out of the United Nations.

His remarks were made in a televised interview with Senator Kenneth B. Keating, Republican of New York. Simultaneously with publication of the text of the interview, Mr. Keating's office circulated a speech the Senator is to deliver on the floor this week denouncing the State Department's moves to recognize Outer Mongolia, a member of the Communist bloc.

Taiwan Opposes Step

The State Department has been exploring the possibility of extending recognition and Outer Mongolia has indicated that it was receptive. The Chinese Nationalist Government is bitterly opposed to the step on the ground that Outer Mongolia is properly a part of Chinese territory.

"There can be only one answer to this question and there should be only one response to this latest trial balloon—a resounding no from the Congress and from the American people," Senator Keating said.

"We want no more Communist satellites and bandits in the United Nations until such time as they can produce positive evidence of respect for the principles of international peace, law and order on which the United Nations is based," he added.

In his remarks, Sen. Keating, a Democrat, protested against what he called "specialized interests" influencing United States foreign policy.

"It has come to the point where we can scarcely do anything without the approval of Chiang Kai-Shek," he said. "If you go to South America, you run into the problem that we can't do this or that a certain time because of the interests of the United States."

Sen. Keating said that he would like to see the United States take a more active role in the world, but that it must first establish a strong moral position.

Chen Cheng, of Nationalist China, will visit U. S.

and be accompanied by Foreign Minister Shen Chang-huan.

They will visit Washington at the invitation of President Kennedy. Andrew Hatcher, assistant White House press secretary, said here that the invitation had been issued in return for courtesies shown to Vice President Johnson when he visited Taiwan on his goodwill tour of Asian and Pacific countries.

One question that probably will be discussed when General Chen and Mr. Shen arrive in Washington is the coming debate on the admission of Communist China to the United Nations.

The United States has succeeded in putting off this question from year to year, but there is a strong possibility that it will at least be debated this fall.

On his visit to Taiwan, Mr. Johnson gave Chinese officials strong assurances of continued friendship and support from the United States.

Mr. Hatcher pictured the Chinese visit, however, more as a matter of international courtesy than as an occasion for important negotiations.
